Keynote Topic: Pathfinder Parenting

Are you a helicopter parent? Do you hover over your child, watching and directing every move? Or maybe you are a hot-air balloon parent, thinking you don't really have much influence over your child at all. There is an alternative. Learn how to become a Pathfinder Parent, and raise your child to become confident and self-reliant. While the helicopter parent solves the child's problems, and the hot-air balloon parent ignores the problems, the Pathfinder Parent helps the child learn to solve his or her own problems.

Pathfinder Parenting is highly interactive, designed to give parents the tools they need to immediately become more effective and less stressed. Participants learn that parenting can be simple and fun and develop their skills to:

- Provide just the right amount of assistance to their child to promote independence
- Stop over-protection and develop self-reliance
- Teach the child to delay gratification
- Decrease reliance on artificial reward systems
- Avoid overindulgence
- Create self-esteem through true accomplishment
